SUGGESTION TO CANDIDATES.

The presentation of a national banner to a G. A. R. Post is always a happy event, and that of last evening was no exception to the rule. The meeting in question possessed some peculiar features which might have passed unmarked if that glorious period, the spring elections, was not so close at hand. When Maurice Shanahan, who is the most probable democratic candidate for mayor, makes a happy presentation speech, it has no particular significance, for he is a deservedly popular citizen of the Fifth ward. Even the equally happy second of Judge Burlingame, who is sure to be re-nominated as his own successor in office, does not excite suspicion, but when Senator Peter Doran, who is looking up thankfully for any official plume that may fall, appears on the scene, the affair begins to acquire a political flavor. The latter's remarks may have had no purpose beyond a cordial expression of good will, but coming as they do from an alien citizen who lived for many years in the United States without renouncing his foreign allegiance and who only became a citizen on the eve of his election to an office, they taste strongly of demagoguery. Mr. Doran's patriotism is remarkably vigorous for a tender infant of sixteen months; he dearly loves the old soldier and had he not been a Canadian he would undoubtedly have been a drummer boy, as he says. All are estimable gentlemen, but if they would avoid criticism, they should also avoid appearance en masse before public gatherings on the eve of election.

FREE WOOL.

Free-trade journals and opponents of the McKinley tariff have advanced many specious arguments against the tariff generally, and the tariff on wool in particular. The fact that wool is cheaper today in the United States than it has been in past years, is charged by them as a direct result of the imposition of the McKinley tariff. And on this most singular inconsistency they weave many fairy tales for the benefit of the farmer. An examination of statistics bearing on the subject would reveal to them that the price paid for wool in England, the greatest wool consuming country in the world, is less than one-half the price paid a decade ago, and lower than ever before. That the sheep-raising industry of Australia has mounted from a comparatively insignificant figure until it now overshadows any other nation; that the alone furnishes 1,000,000,000 pounds of wool, or about one-half of the world's production, and that her facilities for sheep raising are such that no other nation can compete with her. Without a protective tariff sheep cannot be profitably raised in this country, except for mutton. They seize on the fact that nineteen per cent of the wool used in this country in 1867 was imported, while sixty-two per cent was imported in 1891, and in this find another argument against a wool tariff, ignoring, however, the more significant fact that in the decade from 1860 to 1870 with only three years of protection to the industry, the number of sheep in the United States increased from 22,500,000 to 28,500,000, or twenty-seven per cent, and that from 1870 to 1890 the increase was forty-four per cent, and in spite of the set back given the industry in 1883 to 1887 our clip increased from 230,000,000 pounds to 308,000,000 during the same period. They also forget to say that in four years, from 1884 to and including 1888 under the Cleveland administration the number of head of sheep in the United States decreased over 10,000,000. These figures are of greater significance than is the low price now prevailing.

LAMB RAISERS.

Wreckage almost invariably follows a storm. The mild and just storm of newspaper comment following Emperor Wilhelm's recent bombastic utterances is now followed by the confessions of the Frankfurter Zeitung, and it is believed other German newspapers are to suffer a like fate. Just how it was possible for any paper to come under the severe German law of lese-majeste for alluding to Wilhelm's mad utterances or hallucinations is hard for the average American to understand. In this day, almost in the beginning of the twentieth century, with the freedom of the press recognized by most recognized nations, to suppress a newspaper and confiscate its plant for criticizing the mad utterances of a mad king savors strangely of kingly prerogative, even in monarchical Germany. If a just criticism be construed to be treason, then the awakening in Germany comes none too soon, and it is time for the people to throw off a yoke which rests none too lightly on their shoulders.

GOOD FELLOWS.

From some points of view "good fellows" are to be envied—they are loved, praised and petted. Nature has endowed them with personal qualities to win esteem. "The good fellow" has amiability, he is generous to a fault and he is obliging. But it is dangerous to be a "good fellow." It is the "good fellow" who says, "Yes," when he ought to say "No." "The good fellow" is the one who will go to places with others, when his good sense tells him he should not go, because he is a "good fellow" and doesn't want to oblige. It is the "good fellow" who is often asked to take a drink and cannot refuse it. It is the "good fellow" who spends money he should save up for a "rainy day," for sickness and old age.

In short, bar rooms, inebriate asylums, poor houses, jails and prisons have in them lots of "good fellows." It is well to be a "good fellow," but to always remember to be good to one's self first. Be a "good fellow" to yourself, to your family, and by making yourself an example for others to follow you will be a "good fellow" indeed.

HARRISON ENDORSED.

The district conventions held throughout the state of Indiana yesterday for the purpose of choosing delegates to the Minneapolis convention, were with the exception of the twelfth harmonious, and transacted the business for which they were assembled expeditiously and with marked enthusiasm. All the conventions passed appropriate resolutions endorsing the Harrison administration. This endorsement coming as it does from President Harrison's home friends is most fitting and will no doubt be pleasing to Mr. Harrison. The effect of the endorsement of their fellow citizen by Indiana on conventions yet to be held will carry more or less weight, but that it will be received as a dictum by other states is not for a moment to be supposed. Local men and local interests elsewhere will receive attention and influence in the selection and instruction of their delegates, but all things considered, Mr. Harrison's star throughout the United States is far above the horizon.

THEY PROTEST.

The Iowa state temperance alliance now in session at Des Moines protests against the Hatch license bill now pending in the Iowa legislature, and denounces Senators Hatch and Brower in most unmeasured terms. This was probably anticipated by these gentlemen as it is in line with the intolerant methods of Iowa prohibitionists. Blind themselves to the hypocrisy daily practiced throughout this fair state, they seek every means of blinding others. In their zeal to compel others to their views, they assume attributes not in consonance with the principles of brotherly love and forbearance taught by Jesus Christ, and to accomplish their ends they stoop to vituperation and abuse wholly at variance with the Christian character they assume. In their efforts to coerce, they forget the power of persuasion. In an endeavor to benefit mankind they do not hesitate to wreck characters. This is wrong and brings odium upon a just cause. They should temper their zeal with Christian love, and go forth with a charity ready at all times to alleviate suffering and bring humanity.

A rice trust is the latest development in the line of trusts. If this trust could so enhance the price of Sam Woe's favorite food as to induce Sam to coil his queue and his himself to Kingdom come, Mr. Powderly and other labor exponents might endorse it as a disguised blessing.

The Indiana convention held yesterday says President Harrison is in the race. Mr. Blair of New Hampshire says that he also is in. But the difference between the two says could only be measured by an astronomer who is used to computing distances to nebular stars.

The belief that the Behring sea commissioners have failed to agree is current in Washington. To those familiar with the Canadian love for poached seal garments this will cause no surprise.

AMUSEMENTS.

Powers—Gillette's New Comedy. A delightful comedy is "All of the Comforts of Home," which was presented at Powers' last evening. Its mirth is wholesome and innocent. There is nothing that is noisy, coarse or suggestive of horseplay. The action is spirited and the many situations and incidents as interpreted by Charles Frohman's magnificent company of players, kept the theater in a continual roar of laughter. In fact no better pleased audience has fled out of Powers' this season. The fun is spirited and furious throughout the four acts. The cast could not be excelled. H. A. Morey was admirable as Egbert Pettibone, as was Miss Pearl Means, as Mrs. Pettibone. Miss Goldie Andrews gave a very pleasing impersonation of Emily Pettibone. S. Miller Kent has often been seen here with the Frohman productions, but he surpassed all previous visits in his work of last evening as Alfred Hastings. Mr. Kent is a player of fine and attractive presence, and his comedy is artistic, unctuous and has the flavor of spontaneousness. Frank Lamb did creditably as Tom McDow, and Jacques Martin's presentation of the broken-down musician was irresistible. Herbert Ayling and Samuel Edwards were capital as Langhorn and Bender. Maud Haslam could not be bettered as Orlanika. The other characters, which were entrusted to Kate Wilson, Misses Foltz, Folson and Mears, Hobson, Hollis, Auburn, Rickard and Sherwood, completed one of the most satisfactory comedy offerings of the season. There will be a matinee today. Closing performance tonight.

General Mention.

Manager Geary has concluded to give the amateur actors and actresses a chance to satisfy their tastes and develop their talents. He will permit a limited number of amateurs to appear at each performance tonight, and each succeeding Friday night during the balance of the season. Those desiring to appear are requested to present themselves as early as possible, in order to insure a proper rehearsal and effect other arrangements. It has been a long time since an amateur night was given in the city, and no doubt Mr.

Geary's invitation will induce a wondrous number of comic subjects to volunteer. Barlow Bros. minstrele will present one performance at Powers' opera house on Monday, March 7. This is said to be the best minstrel show that the Barlow Bros. ever organized. Among the principals may be mentioned Billy Barlow, James Barlow, Larry McAvoy, Archie Royer, Arthur LeBourd, the Manhattan quartet, Thompson and Duchs, Leon Brown, "Ferry," and others. Seats are now on sale.

Manager Hartman is in the city busily engaged in billing the Bell Bros. Comedienne specialty and comedy congress, which will appear at Smith's opera house the coming week, commencing Monday, March 7. The company comes highly recommended by both press and public as being an A 1 company. Comprise twenty star artists, in a grand vaudeville entertainment.

The indications are that standing room will be in great demand next Wednesday night, when the great Bernhard will appear at Powers' in "La Tosca." It will be a scenic production. It requires five cars to transport Bernhard and his company and properties about the country.

"His Nibs, the Baron," is the title of a rollicking comedy which will open at Redmond's tomorrow evening. The company boast of two leading ladies, Marie Clayton and Lottie Winnett, two celebrities who have often appeared here. Seats are now on sale for this engagement.

Sig. C. De Gloria is in the city with the pleasing announcement that Libera, the renowned cornetist, and his concert company will shortly appear here.

Florence Bindley, who has proved justly popular with the patrons of Redmond's, will give two performances of "The Pay Train" today.

Downing's Creoles, who give a novel program, are announced for the usual Saturday afternoon performance at Smith's.

Manager Geary reports excellent business at his business and theater this week.

CONDITION OF THE NEGRO.

The Rev. J. B. Massiah Discourages Higher Education at Present.

A fair sized audience assembled at St. Mark's church last evening to hear J. B. Massiah, the colored Episcopal clergyman, speak upon the negro question in general, and his particular work among his people in Cairo, Illinois. Mr. Massiah said that of the 10,000,000 negroes in the United States, about 7,000,000 of them lived in the south where a great gulf is fixed between them and the whites. He believed that the church alone could make the whites see that it was their duty before God to treat the negroes as if "all men are created equal," and that the church is able to deal with the colored problem, in spite of the social, political and religious prejudices of the present. Colored clergymen for the colored people are a necessity, the speaker said, for "negroes are actually afraid of a white man's society," although they are so well accustomed to it. It is not natural for the two races to be together.

Mr. Massiah advocated the arch-deaconry system in the south, and would put colored men in the high positions of the church, so that they could mingle with the people more than the white bishops do. He believed that the negro church gives a colored bishop for the colored people exclusively, the better it will be for all concerned.

The speaker then spoke of his own work in Cairo, Ill., and gave some interesting facts concerning St. Michael's parochial school, which he has founded there. There are 187 children, from 8 to 18 years of age, enrolled on the school books, forty of whom are in the industrial department. One hour of every day is given to religious instruction, and all are obliged to attend the 11 o'clock morning service on Sunday. A boy-choir conducts the singing, not because he is a ritualist, but because he has found his people so emotional that they must have some way of expressing what is in their hearts, and they all enjoy the boy choir. Mr. Massiah dwells the influence of the Roman Catholic church on the negroes because of their fondness for ceremonies. There are three teachers in the school, and a place was made for money to pay the salaries of these teachers. The pupils are taught to wash, cook, and nurse, and in the last few months Mr. Massiah has sent out eight servants from the school. He says there is a demand for colored nurses and makes something of a specialty of teaching nursing. It is his aim to educate his people for their sphere—not for a station above it—and to make them good honest citizens in that sphere. He discourages any disposition on their part to get a living out of the whites without working for it, many of them seeming to think that since the whites took their earnings for 300 years, it was time something is turned over to them without compensation. He tells them that they can't all be congressmen and senators, but he wishes he could give them positions as cooks or nurses. He objects very seriously to giving the negroes college educations and cramming their heads full of Greek, Latin and German, for he believes that a negro is a poorer waiter for being a better scholar. His constant aim is not to overreach in educating the negroes—at least not just yet.

The speaker believes that the negroes have been put in this country by God for some good purpose—may be to learn to be missionaries to their brethren in darkest Africa. Trouble would result from a migration of the negro from the south at this time. King Cotton would come forth and say, "We will not let you go." The lecturer made an eloquent appeal for the race who took care of the helpless women and children during the dark days of the war and were faithful and true to "ole miss" when they might have massacred her, and cloved by begging Christians "not to refuse Ethiopia when she stretches forth her hands for the light."

At the close of the talk Dr. Fair spoke a few earnest words in support of Mr. Massiah's cause, and a collection was taken up.

HOME FOR SOLDIERS' WIDOWS.

The Relief Corps of the State Working for that End.

The question of establishing a home for soldiers' widows is being agitated by the Women's Relief Corps throughout the state, and Mrs. Sara L. Brown of Ithaca, president of the state department, is working untiringly for the success of the project. She is making a thorough canvass among the corps and has learned that the proposition is supported with a practical unanimity. Grand Rapids is mentioned as the place most favorably considered for the location of the home. Mrs. Brown has called a joint meeting of the corps of this city, to be held in Hicks' hall Wednesday afternoon for the consideration of the matter. It is understood that the corps will furnish a portion of the funds required for the construction of the building and for the purchase of the site and that an appeal will be made to the next legislature for an appropriation to complete the fund.

Their Third Anniversary.

The third anniversary of the organization of Amasa B. Watson W. R. C. was pleasantly observed yesterday afternoon. The celebration was participated in by the members of Chamberlain and Custer corps and Mrs. Sarah Dewey of the National Aid society as guests. Mrs. Emma P. Runion on behalf of Custer corps presented a gave to Mrs. Josephine Virgil, president of Watson corps, with appropriate remarks. The day's enjoyments closed with refreshments.

Went to Lynch a Negro.

SHERMAN, TEXAS, March 4.—About 500 citizens from town and country, with guns and pistols, went to the jail last night for the purpose of lynching Sam Massey, the negro who so brutally clubbed and outraged the family of William Smith Monday night.

When a demand was made for the keys they were handed over. Every cell and crevice were searched, but the prisoner had been spirited away by the officers. The countrymen are yet in town, and the search will be continued. Ammunition and firearms have been bought and borrowed freely.

There is little doubt that Massey is the person who committed the brutal tragedy at the Smith place. Smith recovered consciousness sufficiently to say that Massey was guilty. It is believed that none of the victims will recover.

Fire Damp Explosion.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 4.—An explosion of fire damp occurred in the Elmwood colliery at Mahanoy City this morning. Five men were so badly injured that they cannot recover. The explosion was caused by a naked lamp carried by one of the miners. The colliery is owned by the Reading company.

Know Its Value. A Cedar Rapids (Ia.) man, who owns a valuable horse, conceived the idea of testing human nature the other day. Accordingly, he hung a placard upon the horse, which was tied in front of his office, announcing that the entire outfit must be sold for thirty dollars. Soon there was a procession of experts looking at the teeth of that poor horse and lifting his feet with a most knowing air, each one in turn announcing that the price was much too high. It was a great object lesson, and no one had discovered that a five hundred-dollar outfit was being offered for thirty dollars when the owner came out and drove away.

Wise Sheep. About thirty years ago Moses Stirling and others put two small flocks of sheep on Monhegan, a bleak and rocky island off the entrance of Penobscot bay, believing that sheep could take care of themselves almost anywhere. Since then the flocks have increased to an aggregate of two hundred and fifty head, running wild and receiving no attention whatever. Once a year men have come to the island, driven the sheep into a pen, and sheared them and marked the lambs. The sheep are now owned by half a dozen persons, some of whom have not seen the stock for twenty years.

NEWSPAPER RECIPES.

They Are Carefully Treasured by Many People.

There is one thing that the majority of men are addicted to in times of epidemic or prevalent diseases, says the Chicago Tribune. That is to cut from their newspaper remedies which are printed for whatever the prevailing disease may be. Just now it is the grip. If you have occasion to ask the average man for anything which causes him to unload his pockets, and you notice carefully, you will discover that he has several recipes for the grip. I have had several instances of this kind appear to me. Men you would never suspect of being afraid of sickness of any kind. A clergyman was at the house of one of his members the other day for luncheon. He left his hat where it became the plaything of a little child and the curiosity of the youngster caused it to turn the sweatband of the hat, and in doing so an extract from a newspaper tumbled out. The child's mother replaced it before the minister had time to discover what had been done, and as she did so she noticed that it was a newspaper prescription for the grip. There is no reason why a minister should not be prepared to doctor himself on short notice the same as other mortals, but as a rule they do not admit that they have any such concern. I was talking to a judge of the superior court one day this week and he had occasion to pull from his pocket a lot of papers. I saw that one was a newspaper clipping on the quickest way to cure the grip.

INSECTIVOROUS PLANTS.

They Do Not Thrive on a Purely Vegetable Diet.

Mr. Francis Darwin, the son of the great naturalist, has been investigating the effect on insectivorous plants of supplying them with, and withholding from them, animal food. He grew two lots of plants under similar conditions. One lot he fed with roast meat, one-fifth of a grain being placed on the secreting glands, while from the other all such material was carefully excluded. The results, says the Spectator, were most marked in the number and weight of the seeds. The number of seeds produced by the fed plants was two hundred and forty to one hundred of the unfed ones, while the total weight of the seeds was three hundred and eighty to one hundred. In other words, the plants which were restricted to a vegetarian diet were invalids compared with the plants furnished with animal food.

Should not that do something toward convincing the vegetarians that their doctrine does not make for health? It is difficult to suppose that if there are even some vegetables which do not flourish on a vegetable diet there can be anything against nature in supplying animals provided with all the instincts and organs which appear to point to a carnivorous diet with a considerable proportion of animal food. And we suppose that the heavier seed would imply also the more fertile seed. At least it is so with wheat, where the heavier the grain the more abundant is its fertility.

No Clocks in Liberia.

Explorer Battikoffler says that a clock is rarely seen in the farm houses of Liberia, and many of the town people have no time pieces. He adds that there are few civilized countries where a convenience can be dispensed with so conveniently. The sun rises at six a. m. and sets at six p. m. almost to the minute throughout the year, and at noon it is directly overhead. Many of the people become so expert in telling time by the sun that they are rarely more than a quarter of an hour in error. In place of alarm clocks they depend upon the crowing cock to arouse them in the morning.
